Let's Put a Stop to Bullying

Unfortunately bullying is becoming more and more common in schools. Recently, I witnessed an incident where a classmate was picked on by another student and I was horrified by the brutality of the event. Although the bully was subsequently punished I feel a more permanent solution to the problem is needed.

While I totally agree that it is necessary to deal with incidents of bullying as they occur, punishment alone won't solve this problem. It just reinforces the bully's belief in the unfairness of society and they will just continue taking their frustration out on others. A more systematic approach is necessary.

Firstly, students should organize awareness campaigns to send a message that bullying is unacceptable and encourage students to report incidents of bullying. Furthermore, some lesson time needs to be dedicated to discussing bullying. Emphasizing the negative consequences of bullying and encouraging students to empathize with others could lead to bullies making more positive life choices.

Bullying is an insidious menace in schools which causes untold misery and suffering to its victims. It is up to all of us to tackle it and make schools safer and healthier environments for everyone.
